Celebrating the hairless head

All exhibition proceeds to Cancer Research

One in two Australians will be diagnosed with cancer by the age of 85. The risk of being diagnosed with breast cancer by age 85 is one in eight for women, one in 721 for men. Deb Rielly, was one of them.

The popular Wonthaggi paramedic, triathlete, tireless volunteer and charity fundraiser, Bass Coast Shire Citizen of the Year 2019 and mother of 19-year-old twin sons, lost her battle with cancer after a 15-year fight just six months ago. During that 15 years she lost her hair through chemotherapy treatment and faced taunts as she refused to wear a wig or a scarf. She became the inspiration for a unique art exhibition staged by ArtSpace which celebrated the hairless head.

The inaugural exhibition in May of this year and part of Creative Gippsland was a great success with paintings, prints, drawings and sculptures all being represented. So great a success that a book is now published and will be launched at ArtSpace this weekend.

The judge, internationally renowned artist, Dr Tony Hanning said of the exhibition, "The quality of the work was outstanding. Some of it was extremely clever, demonstrating exceptional painting and drawing skills while some of it was more deliberated and worked but in both cases excellence was the final outcome."

All proceeds go to the Cancer Council. "Deb's incredible courage has inspired us to come together as a community in Gippsland to raise funds to make cancer a disease of the past," said ArtSpace President and organiser of the event, Liane Arno.

Next year will follow a similar theme to this year's with a special preview of artworks at the Wonthaggi Town Hall in conjunction with the Cancer Council's Biggest Morning Tea on May 20th. One volunteer, Helen Laing has been running these morning teas for 20 years – so it promises to be very special.

We invite you to join us for our book launch on December 8, 2019 from 4 – 6pm. Please email at archiesbaldprize@gmail.com to assist us with catering.
